COP'S GHOST TEACHES MOM CPR — AND SAVES CHILD'S LIFE!

LONG-DEAD police dispatcher Marie Voisart gave desperate mother Catherine Clement CPR instructions over phone.

By SANDRA LEE / Correspondent

Authorities say the ghost of a dead police dispatcher told a frantic mother how to administer CPR and save the life of her dying child!

"I know it sounds like something out of a movie but it happened, it really and truly happened," Police Capt. Robert Genestar told reporters in Nancy, France.

"The young woman who called us for help told us that dispatcher Marie Voisart told her how to revive her dying baby.

"She could not have known it, but Marie Voisart was killed in an auto accident on Aug. 14, 1992."

The strange drama unfolded when Catherine Clement, 28, found her 7-year-old daughter, Laura, lifeless and motionless on the bottom of a backyard pool.

She got the little girl out of the water — then realized she didn't have the emergency skills to revive her.

LITTLE Laura Clement, left, would be dead if her mom Catherine hadn't received emergency help from a dead police dispatcher

"I was hysterical but managed to call the police to ask what I should do," said Mrs. Clement. "The woman on the other end of the line spoke very reassuringly and calmed me enough to listen to her instructions.

"She told me how to drain the water out of Laura's lungs and administer CPR to get her breathing again.

"When I finally did, I was so grateful that I wanted everyone to know what she had done.

"She told me her name was Marie Voisart. And just to make sure I had it right, I wrote the name down. I also jotted down the time. It was 11:28 a.m."

Capt. Genestar confirmed that Mrs. Clement placed an emergency call to police headquarters.

He also noted that the regular dispatcher had walked away from his console, leaving it unmanned, when Mrs. Clement had apparently gotten through.

"Our telephone calls are recorded automatically and this one was no exception," said the cop. "When we play back the tape, all we can hear is Mrs. Clement.

"Judging from what she says, it would appear that she is asking questions of and taking instructions from someone who we can't hear. Mrs. Clement says that someone was Marie Voisart. And she did save the life of her child, so it must be true."

Paranormal researcher Raymond Rison said that the case was "one of the most astonishing instances of spirits reaching from beyond the grave to assist the living," said the Paris-based expert.

"It seems impossible. But evidence shows that it does happen now and then."

Capt. Genestar said, "Marie loved children. She had handled child emergencies before, and always made sure that our officers attended to them immediately, when she was alive.

HOFFA'S BODY FOUND!

18-year mystery solved!

Missing Teamster boss washes up on Mississippi Riverbank

Police investigators say they have a positive identification on a corpse they found floating in Mississippi River floodwaters: It's Teamster boss Jimmy Hoffa!

Fingerprints and dental records indicate that it's the dead labor leader, but authorities will not acknowledge that they have the body or make an official announcement about the find until DNA tests confirm the dead man's identity.

"He was alive and had surfaced recently and was even photographed in January of 1993, meeting with President Clinton," said a source in St. Louis, Mo., where the body is allegedly being kept on ice. "There were rumors that he was attempting a lot of support on the labor scene and that his old enemies were afraid he might try to come back to power.

"We think that whoever tried to wipe Mr. Hoffa out the first time went after him again — and this time they succeeded.

"They strangled him and dumped him in the river apparently thinking the flood would take care of his body."

According to the source, who spoke off the record, the Teamster's body was among three corpses fished out of the river on July 29 at the height of the Mississippi floods. Efforts to identify the corpse were routine and included a check of FBI fingerprint files.

Authorities were shocked when computer analysis confirmed that the fingerprints belonged to James Hoffa, the Teamster leader who had gone into hiding on July 30, 1975, then reportedly reappeared in Argentina in 1982.

"At first we assumed we were dealing with a drowning victim, but once we knew who it was we checked closely for cause of death," the source said.

"We discovered that the deceased had been arrested and that he had died of strangulation and a severed spinal cord.

"We believe that Mr. Hoffa was killed by Mafia rivals or perhaps by Kennedy family sympathizers who think he helped engineer the assassination of President John F. Kennedy.

"Whoever did it, they did a professional job. This was no casual mugging."

Authorities have requested a DNA readout on the corpse before deciding conclusively that the dead man is Mr. Hoffa. But that's just a formality, the source said.

"They're sure it's Mr. Hoffa and that he's dead at last," he said. "This time

MELTING

"Melting Woman" Chandra Patel Singh has been transformed by the miracle of modern medicine — into an attractive brunette with a perfectly normal appearance!

By BEATRICE DEXTER
Special report

AMAZING melting woman was first featured in the Oct. 23, 1982 issue of Weekly World News.

The 28-year-old Indian woman made headlines a few years ago because of a rare condition that caused her flesh to turn soft and melt off her bones like hot wax off a candle. American doctors heard of her plight and offered to treat her free of charge. After three operations and 10 months on an experimental drug, she's a new woman.

"I can't thank my doctors enough for what they have done to help me," said Chandra, whose skin used to hang grotesquely from her body in hideous bumps and lumps. "All my life people have turned their backs on me and children have run screaming from me in fear. Now at last I'm just one of the crowd."

Chandra was first featured in the pages of Weekly World News in October of 1982, after news of her bizarre disease made headlines in India. At that time doctors — who admitted they could not explain her condition — predicted she would not live very long.

The first signs of her disease appeared in 1965 and over the years took a terrible toll. The flesh melted and dropped off the left side of her face. Her nose looked like a blob of dough and she lost the sight in one eye. Her skin was covered with bumps and two of her fingers were so swollen she could not use them.

Treated like a freak, the poor woman was a virtual recluse until tailor Rabindrath Singh read about Chandra and fell in love with her. The couple married in July of 1982, and two months later Chandra received an invitation from surgeons in California to come to America for treatment. The Singhs have lived in this country since that time.

"Since my last operation, I

Sicko teens laugh their heads off — while boy drowns!

HEROIC teen Mary Roach sits at the riverbank near the spot where her pal Joey Ignola lost his life.

By DICK DONOVAN | Staff writer

"Now there's one less geek on the street."

That was the disgusting comment made by one of the teenage cowards who stood by laughing as 14-year-old Joey Ignola drowned in the St. Lawrence River.

Though Joey, who couldn't swim, was within arm's reach of shore, no one could stop laughing long enough to offer him a hand. No one, that is, except his 13-year-old friend, Mary Roach, who tried to save him — but failed. Joey lived with his mom in Cornwall, Canada only a couple of blocks from the great St. Lawrence where he loved to fish.

A quiet, gentle boy, he took a lot of cruel teasing from other kids because he was a bit slow and attended a special school. They called him names and dared him to jump into the water, knowing full well that he couldn't swim.

When Mary saw Joey fishing from a wet rock by the shore, she kept close by, worried that he might fall in. And that's exactly what happened.

When she saw Joey slip into the water and sink beneath the surface, the petite young girl didn't hesitate. Putting her own life smack on the line, she dived into the river's ripping current in a desperate effort to save her friend. She managed to find Joey's arm in the dark, swirling water and she clawed at a stone shelf in a fruitless effort to pull him to safety. But Joey slipped away.

Frantically, Mary dove for him again and again, but couldn't find him. Finally, she realized that her friend was gone. Incredibly, a few teenagers standing nearby ignored Mary's screams as she struggled to save her friend. Help could have been the difference between life and death.

"They saw he was drowning and they didn't help me," the gutsy 7th grader said. "I yelled loud, but they just stood there."

The best one teen could muster was the courage to call Tracy Clute, a neighbor, and apologize for standing by while Joey went needlessly to his death.

"I told him that wasn't good enough," Tracy said. "I told him, 'You don't stand there laughing when someone is dying!'"

That's a thought Mary Roach will live with for a long, long time.

TWIN

THEY'RE SO CUTE! Pamela Trillor says people are stunned to find out her sons are identical twins.

They're both doing fine, says proud mom!

By TANYA BRODER
Correspondent

Baby brothers Michael and Matthew Trillor are identical twins, but the pair don't look like it — because at three months one weighs a hefty 26 pounds and the other tips the scale at just over 5!

The little boys' difference in size is the greatest ever recorded in twins delivered at the same time, but both babies are perfectly healthy, doctors say, and even remarkably advanced for their age.

They developed their shocking weight difference because of conditions in the womb.

"The doctors told me Michael was attached to a small, extremely narrow umbilical cord and got very little nour-lishment in the womb," said the twins' mother, Patricia Trillor, 31. "Most of the nourishment went to Matthew, who grew much faster than his brother.

"When my babies were born 13 weeks ago, Matthew was a little butterball who weighed 15 pounds. Michael weighed less than a pound at birth, but he was well developed and didn't even need an incubator."

The twins' size difference has remained since they were born at their single mom's apartment in Chicago.

Today, Michael — who eats a special high-calorie diet — weighs five times as much as he did at birth, but he's still a teensy cutie for his age. On the other hand, Matthew is already an armload for his mother, having nearly doubled his weight since birth.

Patricia, an unemployed waitress, says most folks don't suspect at first that the boys are twins, even though they look exactly alike except for their size.

And whenever people find out the boys are identical twins, they often assume something's wrong with Michael.

"They think he's sick or developmentally retarded or something, but the doctors say he's just fine," said Patricia. "The doctors say Michael will catch up to his brother in a year or so and that from then on the boys will be the same.

"Meanwhile, my boys are alert and active. And they are way ahead of other babies their age. They're already sitting up and starting to crawl."

The twins are celebrities in their neighborhood, where they attract a lot of attention when proud Patricia takes them for walks in their stroller.

"Folks call them 'The Big and Little Twins,' " Patricia says. "They make friends wherever they go."

AMAZING HEN LAYS HAM 'N' EGGS!

By RICK TRACY · [illegible]

An Arkansas farmer claims he has revolutionized breakfast for millions of Americans by crossing a chicken with a pig — and produced a ham-and-egg egg.

"When you buy a dozen of my eggs at the local supermarket, you're not just getting eggs. You're getting a complete breakfast," said poultry farmer Pablo Boulliter.

"All of these amazing eggs have little bits of ham in them," he said. "Offering these for breakfast is a lot less expensive than buying the ham and eggs separately."

BOULITER

Boulliter, 69, has been tinkering with cross-breeding at his 10-acre farm near Batesville for the past 13 years but never had much success.

"I tried a special form of artificial insemination to cross-breed other animals on my farm without success," he said.

"Then I hit upon the small obvious idea, crossing one of my pet pigs with a chicken. It took me five years, but I've got something very special for America's breakfast table."

The cautious farmer declined to divulge specific details of his special artificial insemination process.

"Basically, I inject sperm containing genes from one of my best hogs into one of my hens," he explained. "It has taken me two years to perfect the process.

"For some reason I can't explain, the egg yolk contains ham but not bacon," Boulliter said. "But I hope to produce a bacon-and-egg egg within a few months. I believe it's just a matter of time."

Boulliter isn't ready to market his incredible ham-and-egg egg, but is working toward that goal.

"I know I'll have a lot to prove, especially when I deal with the Food and Drug Administration and the powerful pork lobby," he said. "But I have

QUEEN ELIZABETH'S ANCESTORS WERE WEREWOLVES

BIZARRE family secret: The Queen has had some wild and wooly ancestors

THE ROYAL forefathers looked a lot like this hairy fellow.

. . . claims Europe's top historian

The Royal House of Windsor? More like the Royal House of Werewolves, says a top European historian whose doggedy research has blown the lid off Buckingham Palace's most closely guarded secret.

"Queen Elizabeth's ancestors were werewolves," says Dieter Manhein, professor of history at the University of Heidelberg, Germany.

"King George V, Elizabeth's grandfather, renounced his German ancestry and proclaimed the House of Windsor on July 17, 1917," says Prof. Manhein.

"The other story is that the king took an English name because of anti-German sentiment during WW I.

"The real reason was to disguise himself and his offspring from a bizarre family secret — werewolves. Lycanthropes, humans who change into werewolves, appear frequently in the Battenberg family tree, the name the King dropped for the name of Windsor. By changing names he hoped to hide his hairy ancestors."

Lightning strike turns Florida beauty into a nymphomaniac!

'My life is hell since I was struck . . . can't go 15 minutes without thinking about sex!'

Dr. Joel Nobert

A woman who was struck by lightning on a Florida beach miraculously survived the staggering jolt — but the 10,000 volts turned her into a nymphomaniac!

"My life has been a living hell ever since I was hit by that lightning," said Lisa Clemons of Rochester, Minn. "And to tell the truth, my sexual obsession is getting worse every day.

"Some people think she is lucky, but I tell you, it's no laughing matter," the unmarried teacher said.

"I can't go 15 minutes without being overcome by sexual desires. I've even had to take an extended leave from my job because of it."

The attractive 32-year-old was on vacation and walking on Miami Beach when she was struck by the lightning.

"I really don't even remember being hit," she said. "My friends told me I was unconscious for about 10 minutes but the first thing I remember was coming to and feeling really frisky. To be honest, I felt really turned on."

But what seemed like harmless fun almost quickly got out of control.

"In the past I'd always had a pretty normal sex life, I guess," Lisa said. "Guys have always told me I was good looking and I never was a prude — but ever the hottest one of those guys I used to look down on.

"Then I've gotten to the point where I'll pick up some or other guy a night or more and then don't even know because I'm so embarrassed about it myself."

"I knew I was getting out of hand so I decided to go to a doctor about it."

Eccentric traveling Lisa says she's never heard of a case like this.

"Since it's extremely rare for anyone to survive such a powerful lightning strike, there is very little research into this problem," Dr. Joel Nobert said.

"But we cannot let that [illegible] that has caused her obsession."

Dr. Nobert said, "We are doing everything we can but haven't found a way to help her."

Lisa said she decided to make her problem known and give an interview to Weekly World News because she hoped its readers can give her some help.

"I'm sure there's someone out there who has some idea that can help me get my life straightened out. Nothing against the doctors but they haven't been able to do anything for me.

HERO: Pat Gaumont 11, and his brother Marc 6, survived a Canadian wilderness ordeal

Kids survive wilderness trek after dad dies of heart attack!

When his dad dropped dead in the rugged Canadian wilds, 11-year-old Pat Gaumont had to grow up fast. And because he was man enough to meet the challenge, he and his kid brother are alive today!

By DICK DONOVAN
Staff writer

Pat and his 6-year old brother Marc were left stranded when their 32 year old father Ron dropped dead of a heart attack in the Quebec wilderness north of the Ottawa River from Matlawa.

The quick thinking boy worked feverishly trying to revive his dad with a CPR procedure he'd seen on TV. But after several minutes, he knew his father was beyond help.

The boys' father had been setting up their camp when the fatal attack struck like a bolt out of the blue. The tent was up, but the air mattresses had to be inflated.

There was a pump that worked off the cigarette lighter in the truck, but the lighter wouldn't work. Pat switched fuses and got the lighter and the pump to work. The boys slept and before dawn they were huddled in the truck.

Pat started the engine, but the heater wouldn't work. After many futile switching, it finally started blowing hot air.

When it got light enough to see, Pat packed fruit and canned drinks into a bag. He took his brother's hand and started hiking. He had wanted to drive the truck, but his dad's boat and trailer were attached and the two boys together couldn't lift them off the hitch.

A few hours later, Pat and Marc came to a private fishing lodge. People there drove them to a telephone where police were called. A couple of days later, they were back with their mother in Gatineau.

"It was a rough ordeal for a kid, but he came through it with flying colors," Police Constable Claude Dion said.

"When he went into the wilderness, he was a boy. When he walked out, he was a man.

"If Pat had not kept his wits about him, both he and his brother could have died out there. Instead they both have a thrilling tale to tell their kids."

TURN BIG MONEY ... INTO LITTLE MONEY!

I've come up with several brilliant ideas in past columns that would turn the economy around pronto.

My latest economic theory just may be the greatest. It's so simple, it frightens me.

Small money. Not worth much. That's right, folks ... small money.

Let's let every American trade in each of his ordinary size bills or regular size coins for two small ones. In other words, for turn in a regular size $5 bill and you get two smaller $5 bills in return.

Japanese risking their lives for a paycheck!

WHAT A WAY TO MAKE A LIVING: Unemployed Japanese execs make $300 every time they get their feet on the line as test dummies

OUT-OF-WORK EXECS MAKING BIG BUCKS — AS CRASH DUMMIES!

By SCOTTY PAR
Correspondent

Out-of-work business execs are so desperate for money they are risking their lives — as test dummies for Japanese auto makers.

At least 100 of them have suffered broken ribs, ruptured spleens, punctured lungs and skull fractures crashing cars at 50 mph in the name of "auto safety."

"It's a source of income for men who have been laid off and it's cheaper than designing and testing expensive computers," said Yoshihisa Takayasu, a senior auto research technician from Osaka.

Auto companies need to crash-test cars to meet government safety standards. But to test a car's safety belts and air bags, they need a human body to measure the impact.

Computer dummies can't be as much like a human being as possible," Takayasu explained. "But what could be more like than a real person?"

Japanese auto makers, Takayasu says, use human test dummies because there are hundreds of thousands of drivers a year compared to the cost of computers.

"And we're hoping to help the country's unemployment problem," Takayasu added.

The human test dummies are told the equivalent of "Be a test pilot, push the electric shock crashing cars head-on broadside and for rear end collisions. They must wear an accelerometer strapped to their heads and spherical mirrors to watch injuries that have been explained to them. Each test lasts about 10 minutes and the participants are paid $300 for an average week."

Former general plant executive Hisao Kayaba, 51, spent almost a year looking for work after he was laid off.

"Everywhere I applied for a job, they turned me down because I was over-qualified," he remarked.

"It's rough being a dummy when you're used to being a bigshot. But I'm not complaining."

'MY BABY!'

Man finds truck in driveway — 10 years after it was stolen!

RIPPED OFF. Mike Vertucci's cherished truck was stolen from his N.Y.C. auto junkyard in 1983

SHOCKED. Mike's "baby" was returned to his Riviera Beach, Fla., auto parts store driveway in 1993

RIVIERA BEACH, Fla. — You could have knocked Mike Vertucci over with a feather when his cherished Ford flatbed truck pulled into the driveway of his auto parts business — 10 years after it had been stolen in New York City.

"I couldn't believe my eyes when I saw that truck after all these years," the 42-year-old father of four said. "It was absolutely amazing.

"I said, 'Nah, this can't be.' I had looked for it for 10 years. Every time I'd see a truck like it go by, it would stop me cold. Then out of the blue, there it is, parked in my driveway."

The stolen red Ford F-350 was stolen from Mike's New York auto parts yard in 1983. Sadly, it wasn't undented.

"I had just polished it, shined it and it had the same bedroom-style bed welded to the cab," Mike said.

He called local cops who passed the case over to the Florida Highway Patrol because the truck's vehicle identification number had been altered.

RULES OF LOVE!

By BARBARA TORCELLI
Correspondent

You can handle the falling in love by following some commonsense rules that will strengthen your relationship and allow it to flourish, reveals a noted authority.

"One of the most difficult problems facing people of every age is how to handle the emotions of love," said Dr. James D. Bardis.

"Inside and outside of marriage, love develops, grows and changes — and each couple must mature along with it. Love is like a jet plane. It must be kept on a steady, unwavering course or it will veer to the heavens — only to crash to earth."

To help you deal with the realities of love, Dr. Bardis, author of History of Family, provided these tips:

● If you are beginning a new friendship, don't throw yourself completely into it until you are certain you and your partner really have enough in common to sustain it.

"Opposites attract but the novelty of it will soon wear off," said Dr. Bardis. "You must have ideals, attitudes and outlooks in common."

● If a misunderstanding threatens the relationship, talk openly and honestly about it with your partner — miscommunication can help to wreck even a crumbling relationship.

"Confront problems as soon as they arise.

"Don't let the problem [illegible] said Dr. Bardis.

● When you're upset, don't let your emotions get the best of you so that you put the blame on your partner to become too critical of that person. Otherwise, you may destroy your partner's ego and destroying the relationship.

● If you are confronted with unrequited love, don't wait for plans, says Dr. Bardis. Maintain contact with friends who will supply psychological support."

Don't hesitate to seek professional advice. "Try to look at unrequited love in a positive way," said Dr. Bardis. "The fact that the love was unrequited can be interpreted to mean there were no real grounds for a relationship. Always remember love and its emotions do not take care of themselves," added Dr. Bardis.

Dear Worried in Bayonne: You're getting all worked up over nothing — but I like it!

Dear Suspicious in Flatbush: I'm no doctor, but it sounds terminal to me.

Dear Forgetful in Los Angeles: I won't tell you what to do, but I will say that I wouldn't bargain a man who couldn't remember my birthday.

Dear Baffled in Middleburg: The answer to your problem is no place on the menu in any three-star restaurant — and sit on it!

Dear Desperate in Nashville: I'd like to help, but to be perfectly frank, I never had any.

Dear Hospitalized in Rochester: The next time your husband wants to have sex in the garage tell him to leave the garage door open.

Dear Widower in Minneapolis: If I lived in a rich man's room for 32 years, I'd hate dusting, too!

Dear Dottie: I met a wonderful man a few months ago and it looks like we're going to get married around Christmas. This guy is highly educated, well traveled and a gentleman in every way.

The only problem is that he has awful table manners. He smacks and drools and hunches over his plate like a hog at the trough. I'm taking him home to meet my parents soon. How can I make him eat right? — Disgusted in New York

Dear Disgusted: When you and your man visit your parents, serve up a finger dinner in their dining room — and dump his grub in a doggie dish. If he doesn't get the message and clean up his act, it's ear rig ht!

Why do store clerks have to be so damn nasty?

Dear Dottie: I was in a department store the other day and asked the clerk if she carried a particular line of shirts. She said: "I think so." So I said: "You think so? Can you find out?" She didn't like that one bit and told me to look for things myself. What's wrong with people these days, Dottie? Don't they know that customers keep them in business? — Furious in Macon

Dear Furious: When I go head-to-head with a no nothing clerk I always come out on top. First, I ask to see the manager of the store. Then I tell him to fly the coop or I'll never come back!

My wacky wife wants me to shave my whole body!

Dear Dottie: My wife of five years has suddenly decided that she doesn't like my body hair and has told me to start shaving or else. I'm not talking about a beard, Dottie. My wife wants me to shave my face, legs, underarms, chest — everything! This is crazy. Is there any way I can get her to change her mind and get off my back? — Worried in Atlanta

Dear Worried: Your wife is going through a phase and I'm sure it will pass. In the meantime, be flexible — and do what the little lady says!

Where can I meet a man who isn't a flake or a fruit?

Dear Dottie: No matter how hard I try I can't find a decent man. All the guys I work with are too busy making money to know how to treat a girl right. And the rest of the guys I meet in bars are so effeminate that I wouldn't date them if they asked. I'm 31 years old. Help! — Lonely in Dallas

Dear Lonely: If you don't know how to attract men in the right way, there's nothing I can say to help. With that in mind, I'd get used to being alone. Time has passed you by, lady, and the sooner you realize it the better!

Ancient drawings on a cave wall contain recipes for cooking dinosaur meat — and they prove beyond a doubt that man walked the Earth millions of years before scientists once believed he did!

The recipes, found last month in a cave about 30 miles east of Suba, Kenya, clearly call for dinosaur meat. But according to experts in the field, dinosaurs disappeared from the Earth more than 60 million years before human beings evolved on this planet.

BE AS THIN AS YOU WANT DIET!

You can be as thin as you want, says a big city doctor — just by following his simple eating program.

"This is the only diet I advocate," declared Dr Robert Levine, a specialist in treating overweight people, who says he's used his diet on at least 10,000 patients in the last five years.

"You can use the strictest form of the diet to get rid of five or 10 stubborn pounds, or you can use it for gradual weight loss. You will never put the weight back on if you follow the diet properly."

Dr Levine's program involves three steps.

[redacted] laced their coffee with powerful carcinogen — so he could inherit the family fortune!

By RICK TRACY

In one of the most cold-blooded and bizarre murder schemes ever hatched, greedy Hans Krueger killed his own brother and sister — with a cancer-causing drug.

"They suffered months and months of unbearable pain as the cancer quickly ravaged their bodies," said Police Inspector Will Schneider. "In the end, they welcomed death."

Money-grubbing Hans, 37, devised his evil plan six years ago so he could gain control of the family's lucrative trucking business. He had inherited with his brother, Karl, 33, and sister, Greta, 27.

Heartless Hans, a chemistry whiz in college, stole [illegible] from the laboratory of a paper institute in Stuttgart, Germany, and stole a metabolizing agent called dimethyl nitrosamine, a [illegible] that could be fatal in concentrations of [illegible].

Within days after taking the powerful liquid [illegible] Karl [illegible] and [illegible] became [illegible]. Both were hospitalized.

"We thought at first they had become infected with some [illegible] disease," said an epidemiologist.

But further tests revealed they had [illegible] cancer.

"We never suspected they were being murdered. Neither had been the need to be examined by a doctor for years.

"And there was a history of cancer in the family. Their mother and maternal grandfather had died of cancer.

After months of horrifying agony, Karl died almost a year to the day after unknowingly drinking the first cupful of poisoned coffee. Greta passed away three months later. Their murderous brother had both brothers cremated.

Ghastly Hans became overcome by wealthy as his vindictive business prospered over the next five years. He was sitting on top of the world, recognized as one of the richest packrats in Europe.

Schoolkids winning prizes for torturing animals!

By LISA MERAKIS, Correspondent

Thousands of innocent animals are being tortured to death for science, an animal rights activist charges — by schoolkids vying for top marks on their high school science projects!

The ambitious students are burning mice alive, plunging electrodes into the skulls of parakeets and cutting off the paws of puppies in the quest for top grades, scholarships or cash awards from drug companies in Japan, according to Kawabata, head of Save [illegible]

"One little girl actually [illegible] there in a neat grader to show how they responded to pain," said Miss Kawabata, 53, in Tokyo. "And she's not unusual — there are hundreds of thousands of school students in Japan who are running to these torture camps in the name of science."

Miss Kawabata says students in her country are under enormous pressure to get into top universities and they will do anything to call attention to themselves scholastically. So when high school science projects are assigned, the kids go overboard and wind up torturing helpless birds, fish and mammals in projects worthy of Nazi concentration camps.

"One boy used searing hot ethered lamps to burn rabbits and then checked how long it took the animals to die," Miss Kawabata said.

"Another boy gouged the eyes out of snakes to see if they could hunt while blind. They couldn't, so they starved to death.

"I saw an experiment two years ago in which a girl actually cut the paws off a litter of puppies to see if the mother dog would treat them differently than normal puppies.

"She learned that dogs make no special arrangements for the handicapped — but her poor little subjects had to be maimed afterwards because they were horribly crippled."

Miss Kawabata says that [illegible] year 300,000 high school students' projects involved cruelty to animals and resulted in the deaths of hundreds of thousands of helpless creatures.

She has started a campaign in the Japanese parliament to outlaw any school science experiments using live animals as subjects.

Husband Dustin, 41, and his girlfriend Trucker M. have been waging the battle of the butts since the day they tied the knot in a Chicago suburb back in 1981.

"Dustin has smoked cigarettes since he was a teenager. When I first met him and I'd almost gotten used to his habit, I decided I'd had enough. I told him I'd leave him if he didn't quit.

But rather than give up his precious cigarettes, Dustin packed up his belongings and left me.

"He's got two kids from a previous marriage and I don't want him around my children smoking his health-ruining cigarettes. So I told him to get out and stay out.

"He's not the only one who's addicted to cigarettes. I'm hooked myself. I've been smoking since I was 15 and I've tried to quit many times. But I've never succeeded.

"Dustin has always been a heavy smoker. He goes through two packs a day. I've begged him to quit, but he refuses. He says he enjoys smoking too much.

"I've even tried to bribe him. I've offered him money and I've also tried to make him feel guilty about his habit. But nothing has worked.

"Dustin's smoking habit drives me up the wall. I've had enough. I'm not going to live with a man who puts his cigarettes before me.

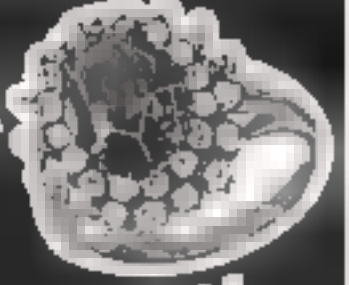
THE KIND OF RING YOU WEAR REVEALS THE REAL YOU!



The kind of ring you wear and the finger you wear it on, reveals a lot about your personality, says a New York psychologist.

Dr. Herbert Hoffman said that a ring "serves as a constant reminder of your status [illegible] or group affiliations."

Here's his analysis:

WEDDING BAND — If you're a woman and you wear a simple unadorned wedding ring, you believe in your "till death do us part" vows. If your wedding band is ornate, intertwined, designed or jewel, you are proud of both your marital status and your state.

"If you're a man and wear any type of wedding band, you are secure with your own sense of masculinity. You can speak softly and make your wishes known. You're willing to compromise to keep the peace," Dr. Hoffman said.

FRIENDSHIP RING — It tells people know there is someone who considers you a valuable individual. "You are unusually selective in your choice of friends, for you hold very high values."

CLUB OR CLASS RING — "You tend to join groups and organizations, you are an activist who prefers to get deeply involved when you believe in something."

BIRTHSTONE RING — "You're always on the lookout for new friendships. You can walk into a roomful of strangers and within minutes become deeply engrossed with several people." Dr. Hoffman said.

COCKTAIL RING — "This is an exclusively female piece of jewelry, but there is a male equivalent — the flashy diamond. If you wear such a ring, [illegible] achievements."

HANDCRAFTED RING — You have a highly artistic nature. You're a trendsetter in your social set.

Where you wear your ring is also very revealing.

"If you wear a pinky ring, you have a flair for the dramatic . . . you like to do things in a big way," Dr. Hoffman said. "If you wear a ring on the index finger of either hand, you have a forceful nature.

"If you wear a ring on the third finger of the right hand, you are well-balanced.

"If you wear just one ring and it is on the third finger of the left hand, you value hearth and family above all."

DIET FOR SENSATIONAL HAIR!

An easy-to-follow diet developed by a consultant to celebrities can give you more beautiful hair — and also promote weight loss!

"The diet is going to help you produce healthier, shinier and stronger hair," declared Philip Kingsley, a specialist in the scientific study of hair and hair care. Kingsley has treated Candice Bergen and members of the British royal family among others.

Kingsley's diet strives for balance. For more beautiful hair, he recommends that people

● Avoid sugar, chocolates, cream-filled pastries, jam and preserves (except honey) canned fruit, sweetened fruit juices, highly spiced foods, curries, fried foods, fat on meat, salt except in cooking and processed food.

● Cut down on all diuretics, coffee and extremely hot drinks.

● Substitute margarine for butter, skimmed or dried milk for whole milk, low-fat cheese (such as cottage cheese) for high-fat cheese, sunflower seed oil for salad dressing and shellfish. Eat at least once a week. Have a salad every day, along with at least one piece of fresh raw fruit, and high-protein fish, poultry or meat.

Kingsley also suggests snacks of raw celery, carrots, radishes or cucumbers and urges that people drink plenty of water, including a glass before going to bed and on awakening.

Here is a typical Kingsley daily menu:

BREAKFAST — ½ cup prunes or raisins, 1 cup bran cereal with ½ cup skim milk, 1 poached or boiled egg, 1 slice whole-wheat toast, 1 cup coffee or tea.

LUNCH — Mixed salad with plenty of greens, dressing of sunflower seed oil, shrimp, 1 cup low-fat cottage cheese, and 1 piece of fresh raw fruit.

DINNER — 1 glass either V-8 tomato or cranberry juice, choice of small serving broiled fish, poultry or lean meat, choice of 1 cup highly cooked vegetables, spinach or broccoli, choice of ½ cup figs, currants or fresh apricots, 1 cup coffee or tea.

Kingsley added that the diet should be supplemented by a minimum of twelve 5-grain tablets of brewer's yeast daily.

Dr. Harvey Wallace Jr., a physician who specializes in nutritionally oriented treatments, said that Kingsley's diet can help people "improve their figure as well as their hair."

And he added: "Because it eliminates excess cholesterol, it should result in an immediate weight loss for many people."

"If people keep a close watch on the portions of food they eat, they will be able to

She's 28 years old ...and a Grandma!

By BEATRICE DEXTER

Pretty Concetta Costa is only 28 years old — but she's already a grandma!

Her daughter Ida presented the young woman with a beautiful baby granddaughter a few weeks ago, making her the youngest woman in Italy ever to become a grandparent.

"My little girl of 14 years has become a mama," brown-eyed Concetta said proudly in Abruzzo, Italy.

"It makes me remember my own pain when I gave birth to Ida in the same hospital.

"My daughter is the one to blame. I told Ida I was young, she can't run away with her boyfriend and also as I did, she got pregnant before she married. After she had her baby she married just as I did. I feel like a mother and a big sister but I'm glad to be a grandmother at 28. It's great."

The mother of three daughters aged 14, 12 and 11 never wanted them to escape an unhappy home life.

She said her husband Giuseppe had split together and separated after Ida was born. Then the young couple told the story of their elopement to the Daughters and Ida posed in the romance tale with star in eyes.

Last year young Ida fell in love for the first time with a neighbor's son, Orazio Ciolfi, right. Inset: the grandmother Concetta Costa, right, holds her granddaughter Rosa, whose birth made Concetta Italy's youngest grandma at 28. Rosa soon has, 14, lives at Ida's young neighbor Orazio Ciolfi.

'daughter's return.' Concetta said. "When she called, I realized that I had forgiven her. She was my daughter and she needed me. After that we were always together.

"This is just like 14 years ago only now I am taking care of Ida and taking care of her little daughter too. I feel lucky and very happy with my new little family," said Concetta.

Motel maid gets $2 tip for returning $170,000 necklace!

"I DIDN'T expect a big reward for doing the right thing, but I did hope to at least break even," says Julia Summers, who spent her own money on newspaper ads to find the owner.

By RICK TRACY
(Correspondent)

LOS ANGELES — Struggling mother of two Julia Summers spent her own little and money finding the rich owner of a $170,000 neck lace she found in a parking lot — and the cheap skate rewarded her honesty with a measly $2 tip.

"I didn't expect a big reward for doing the right thing, but I did expect to at least break even," said Julia, 27, who holds down two jobs to make ends meet.

"I spent $15 on newspaper ads and about three hours of my time trying to find the owner of that beautiful diamond and emerald necklace."

The single mother of two lit tle girls, who works 14 hours a day as a waitress and motel maid, found the expensive necklace in a shopping mall parking lot.

"I never thought about keeping it, even after a jeweler told me how much it was worth. I think my daughters h[illegible] her Bennet and I'm no hypo crite."

The wealthy owner read the ad and called Julia, describing the necklace. She apparently lost it in a Los Angeles mall parking lot only a few minutes before Julia found it.

"We decided to meet out side the same mall. She was a well dressed woman in her early 40s.

"The necklace was a birth day gift from her husband and she was ecstatic to get it back," Julia said.

After a few minutes of small talk, the grateful woman — a banker's wife — reached in her purse.

"Your honesty should not go unrewarded," she told Julia.

Then she pulled out a roll of bills and handed Julia $2.

"I felt like giving it back to her, figuring the old tightwad needed it a lot more than I did," Julia told Weekly World News.

"But I thanked her and kept the money.

"She got into her Rolls Royce and drove away."

'The angels are calling me away,' said brave Texas bride!

COURAGEOUS Erika Valdez was confident about the future as she walked up timing her

By DICK DONOVAN - Staff writer

"Mama. Papa. Today I am going to die . . . the angels are calling me!"

A few hours later — just one day after she was married in a "dream wedding" — 19-year-old Erika Valdez kissed her parents and new husband goodbye, then closed her eyes and died!

After years of chemotherapy, radiation and a bone marrow transplant, the young Texas beauty, who never cried and never complained, had finally lost her courageous battle with leukemia.

But not before she realized one of her fondest dreams — to be married in a white wedding dress.

"She was a beautiful bride," her anguished father Israel Olivares told Weekly World News in an interview in his home in Dallas. "It was nice to see her so happy.

"Some people may have wondered how we could allow such a young girl to get married. But we knew she was going to die. How could we say no?

"About a week before she died, she told her mother, 'I don't want you to cry for me. I don't want anyone to cry for me. I don't like tears.' She was a very special little girl."

CANCER CLAIMS TEEN — 1 DAY AFTER HER DREAM WEDDING!

BEAUTIFUL Erika and her husband Joaquin Valdez

Erika's leukemia was diagnosed when she was 13.

That put her into radiation and chemotherapy for the next 3½ years.

"She'd dress up for her hospital visits as if she were going to a party," recalled her mother, Dora. "She always wanted her clothes to match."

Then last December, Erika got some news that sent her spirits soaring. Tests indicated that a bone marrow transplant from her 3 year old sister Felicia. At best, it only delayed the inevitable.

During what were to be her final weeks of life, a friend introduced her to 19 year old high school senior Joaquin Valdez. Erika fell madly, hopelessly, head over heels in love with the tall, young lad she saw as her knight in shining armor.

"She said, 'Mom, this boy has an accent. He likes me. I look like a monster!'" Dora said. "But the boy said he liked her for who she was, not how she looked."

And so it was that just a few short weeks ago, Erika and Joaquin became husband and wife.

At the reception, the happy couple danced, cut the wedding cake and posed for pictures. She threw her bouquet, both were showered with rice.

The next day, Erika heard the angels calling.

The REAL difference between men and women!

Scientific research has revealed the surprising real difference between men and women. It's the way their brains work!

What sounds like [illegible] man's name to a man accepts the vanquishing cricket to a soldier.

Women have more sensitive taste and are more sensitive to being touched. They have better daylight vision and fast reaction time.

And these are just a few of the differences scientists have found in the way the brains of males and females work.

Researchers found that men talk rather more bluntly and more often than they love and have much better control over their hands and fingers.

By contrast, boys are all thumbs when it comes to using their hands but they're tougher, faster and more active than girls. And they are natural explorers who love to find things apart and discover how they work.

"Men and women do think differently. The evidence is enormous. That's because of the difference in the organ of the body that is the progenitor of all behaviour — the brain," explained Dr Richard Restak, a neurologist.

Dr Diane McGuinness, a leading researcher in the field, said in a recent report that as human beings get older, the differences between the sexes increase."

Scientists have concluded that girls are born with acute, better sensory perception. Their hearing is so much sharper that the din of a noisy school would have to be loud to appear as to men.

Girls make more attentive listeners and respond more emotionally to what is said.

As the men, they have better vision in daylight and better

ARTIST'S CONCEPTION: Ghastly scene of death-crew of half-crazed men, was described by divers who explored the ship's hold

Hot tips for microwave cooking!

If you're one of those cooks who likes to convert recipes from conventional cooking to the microwave, here are a few guidelines to follow to boost your success rate:

- Cut cooking time from 25 to 33 percent. Microwave a quicker
- There is less evaporation in a microwave, so liquid measures by 25 per cent
- Recipes that can be thickened in a round casserole conventional will because the food can be stirred occasionally during cooking
- The larger the quantity of food, the longer it will take to microwave
- Foods high in fat and sugar microwave faster
- Always undercook. You can always correct if undercooked but nothing will save overcooked food

And remember, foods microwave from the outside in, not from the middle out

CARGO SHIP Captain Peter sent down to Davy Jones's locker in 1953 at the coast of Africa

By JOHN XAVIER

The crew of a ship that sank 10 years ago miraculously survived in their underwater tomb until divers rescued them late last month, say authorities.

The eight-man crew of the cargo ship Alcyone Trader went down on June 21, 1953.

As authorities pointed out, there was no way they could have known that an emergency air bubble formed in the hold, literally providing the crew members with space to live until they could breathe. They also had enough food and water to last for 10 days.

The ship was carrying canned meats and bottled water when it sank.

EX-PRESIDENT WORSHIPPED AS A GOD — by jungle tribe!

BIG HAIRD Lyndon Johnson is published in Italy, where and Dutchman died by a savage New Guinea tribe

By BENJAMIN GUNN

A Stone Age tribe of cave dwellers in the rugged and remote Bismarck Mountains of central Papua New Guinea worships a former U.S. President as a god-king, reports the stunned leader of a recent anthropological expedition to the area.

A striking and weirdly color photograph of Lyndon B. Johnson hangs decorated with flowers in the impressive, cathedral-like cave of the primitive tribe's high priest, said Dr. Ulrich Bitterfeldt of the University of Utrecht in Holland.

"It's absolutely mindboggling," he said at a news conference. "Once or twice a week, the entire tribe assembles a torchlight procession to the cavern and carries baskets of orchids and exotic vegetables as offerings to their god-king."

HOW TO READ A FACE LIKE A BOOK!

Your facial features reveal your personality, says an expert in facial reading.

"Certain behaviors create certain features," declared expert Larry Tiegs.

Dallas psychologist Alan Griffin agreed: "The face will reflect a person's reaction to life. Given a recurrent, prevalent feeling, the facial characteristics that portray that feeling can become more or less permanent."

And National Aeronautics and Space Administration policy analyst Dr. Michel Nader used face reading in dealing with personnel problems as deputy director of astronautics. "I also found face reading very useful in personal relationships," he said.

Over a five-year period, a research team studied more than 1,500 people and validated 49 personality factors that can be read from facial features, Tiegs said. They found that 93 percent of the time facial features accurately revealed specific personality traits.

Here are some of the facial indicators they verified:

● Eyes: The larger the iris (the colored portion), the more a person tends to show emotion. People with small irises keep their feelings hidden. The person with only a small part of his eyelid showing takes time to make up his mind, but the person with a lot of eyelid showing is more direct, wanting to deal with the obvious without a lot of deliberation.

● Eyebrows: A relatively flat eyebrow indicates a need for harmony and a sensitivity to feelings. People with inverted-V eyebrows appreciate structure, form and geometric proportion. Eyebrows high above the eye belong to discriminating people who can seem aloof, while eyebrows closer together or to the eye reveal a person who is more approachable.

● Nose: The bottom nose indicates a person with a feel for the timeliness of what's happening. If the bridge of the nose is scooped, he is spontaneously helpful, while a "Roman" or "hawk" nose indicates someone who is more commercial-minded and price-conscious.

If the tip of the nose sticks [illegible] out or is [illegible] it denotes a skeptic, while a plug nose shows an open-minded person.

● Lips: A thin upper lip indicates brevity in speech. A person with a thick bottom lip gives his time and service sympathetically, while a person

MIRACLE UFO DOCTOR

A miracle cure by a space alien doctor when she was 4 years old . . . a frightening encounter with creatures with eyes like golf balls when she was 9 . . . and a physical examination aboard a UFO when she was in her 30s — by the very same extraterrestrial doctor who had cured her as a child!

Detroit woman's close encounters baffle experts!

These are among the incredible memories of Detroit businesswoman Adrienne Wundt, now 45, who knew nothing about her eerie contacts until she was hypnotized recently by famed UFO investigator Dr. Stephen Divorky.

"She'd never suspected that her longtime interest in UFOs was in part motivated by the unconscious memory of several UFO experiences she'd had starting at the age of 4," Dr. Divorky said.

In Mrs. Wundt's earliest recollection of an alien encounter, she described a doctor who visited her while she was in a hospital as a child, a victim of hepatitis. She said the doctor came in her three times, late at night, "after the nurses went to sleep."

On each visit he gave Adrienne candy, rubbed her feet and back — and on the third visit he attached two black boxes to her with wires, one to her abdomen and one to her head. The very next day, the girl was discharged from the hospital — completely cured.

At another hypnotic session, Mrs. Wandt recalled two bizarre-looking creatures who met her at a lonely place near her Michigan home when she was 5 years old.

"They told her they were her friends and that they had saved her life years earlier," Dr. Diveky said. "The thing she remembered best was their eyes, which she described as being a dull white, without any visible pupil, about two inches in diameter and protruding like golf balls."

During a third hypnotic session, the woman recalled a vacation trip to South Carolina when she was in her mid-30s. She remembered being taken aboard a UFO and examined by the same doctor who had cured her when she was 4.

"He was the only person aboard who said anything

"He spoke English but had an accent. He acted as if he knew her. It was definitely the same person."

Three or four other creatures aboard the craft stood less than 5 feet tall, had large heads and frail bodies — and bug-eyes just like the aliens she had seen when she was 5.

"We have enough additional and similar cases that we know this is not an isolated case, nor is it the product of a fear or delusion," Dr. Diveky said.

SNAKE HANDLERS NO MATCH FOR RILED RATTLERS!

Pittsburgh doctors scrambled to find an antivenin serum for two nutty snake handlers who got a little too close to some deadly rattlers.

Brian Grabinski, 23, and Joseph Halamahek, 34, were engaged in a competition at the Sportsmen Club in West Newton, Pa., which entailed picking up diamondback rattlesnakes using a two-pronged stick.

Both victims declined medical treatment for the bites in their hands at first, but as the evening approached, they became nauseous, with arms swollen from fingers to shoulder.

So the unlucky snake charmers called an ambulance and took themselves in for some anti-snakebite treatment, said Spiritatten Club representative Christine Lagares.

"I just messed up," responded Grabinski when he was asked what happened.
